A Short History

The Olympia Country and Golf Club (OCGC) has a long history in Olympia. It was founded in 1917 and was originally located in Lacey on the site that is now Panorama City. In 1925 the club was relocated to its current location on Butler Cove. It started as a 9-hole course and expanded to an 18-hole course in 1958.

In 2012 Dr. Angela Bowen, a longtime member, purchased the club, land and property. Bowen invested a large amount of money to update the facilities, promote membership and stabilize the budget. She ushered OCGC into the future and placed the club in a favorable position for growth. An important part of her legacy was the creation of a vision for the club: "To provide exceptional country club experiences for members, guests and families in an environment that encourages enduring friendships for the long-term sustainability of the club."

Bowen passed away in 2017 and the OCGC became one of the assets of the Bowen Estate. It is Bowen's vision that has been the driving force behind the effort of a group of current club members to pool their resources to purchase the club from the Bowen Estate.

The newly formed OCGC LLC wants to ensure that the club operates as a viable business while maintaining Bowen's vision for a member-focused club. In addition to the vision, the following principles will guide future development:

To preserve the legacy of the club's role in providing a platform for social, cultural and leadership activities in the Olympia community.

To preserve access to the irreplaceable natural assets we currently enjoy at the club, including the mountain view, salt waterfront access, and 99 acres of open space.

To maintain the sense of history that the club has had over time and to nurture multi-generational friendships.

To develop an infrastructure that will provide sustainable systems for the economic needs of the club, including multi-generational patterns of leadership successors.
